Why is this so special? Don't just take our word for it, pluck any of the high fashion magazines off the rack and you'll see that "polished and uncut" gemstones are popping up on runways from New York to Milan. Most importantly, this Raw Sapphire Necklace gives you a staggering carat weight without the staggering price.

The golden age of black and white Save $200.00! - In 1927, the crown jewel of movie palaces opened in New York City. Dubbed "The Cathedral of the Motion Picture," the majestic Roxy boasted more than 5,800 seats, a staff of 300 and a price tag of $12,000,000. The theatre housed a hospital with operating room, a radio broadcasting studio and a 550-ton ice cooling plant. But it was the opulent, cavernous interior that left patrons speechless.

A fabulous 52-diamond watch that can change colors to match your mood...or your outfit! - Save $100.00! -

At the start of the 20th century, even wristwatches had a glass ceiling. Timepiece traditionalists believed that watches belonged in your pocket, not on your arm.

A masterpiece in miniature Save $50.00! - The world's largest diamonds may be visually stunning, but they aren't what one would call 'practical.' The 530-carat, pear-cut Star of Africa (a 1/4 lb of precious stone!) is estimated to be worth about $400,000,000. You don't break out that kind of bling for just any occasion. Even Queen Elizabeth peeks at it through 2-inch shatterproof glass in the Tower of London. And she owns it! But thanks to our skilled designers, you can enjoy the look and sparkle of that spectacular stone whenever you desire.
